

A Modern Day Warrior Lodge:
A Vision for the Northern Plains Indigenous Leadership Institute

By: Bradley Stewart Young

Community Governance Project Report
Submitted in Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree of
MASTER OF ARTS IN INDIGENOUS GOVERNANCE

University of Victoria
February 6, 2005
© Bradley Stewart Young
University of Victoria

This project is a revisioning of Indigenous ceremony from the northern plains, which was used in the past to train the generations in their respective roles and responsibilities for the health of their peoples. Utilizing Indigenous research methodologies, relying upon Indigenous knowledge systems, and drawing upon the combined wisdom of those "who know," a renewed vision of Indigenous leadership training was articulated for implementation on the northern plains of Turtle Island.

The report is confidential and cannot be loaned out to the general public nor may it be reviewed or loaned out in any manner to students within the Indigenous Governance Program or to its faculty without permission from the Author. To inquire please contact igov@uvic.ca.