Yvonne Brown has reinvented herself as an independent researcher and biographer after spending 39 years in the BC education system. She was recently a post-doctoral fellow at the Harriet Tubman Institute for Research on the Global Migration of African Peoples, York University. Her research, writing and workshops focus on how the legacies of the transatlantic slave trade and plantation slavery on the continent of Africa and in its Diasporas are remembered in various struggles for citizenship. Author of Dead Woman Pickney: A memoir of childhood in Jamaica (2010).
