Crime Prevention and Community Safety for Children and Youth in Canada

Edited by Michel Vallée and Tullio Caputo

This book presents a collection of essays from some of Canada’s most well known scholars on the safety, health and well-being of children and youth. Several introductory chapters provide a useful overview of the concept of crime prevention and explore both historical and contemporary research describing Canada’s experience in this area. The remainder of the book builds on this framework with original articles addressing topical issues such as evidenced-based crime prevention, early intervention models, youth gangs, violence against young women and the experience of Aboriginal youth. The book provides a compelling discussion of comprehensive community crime prevention. It is based on Canadian research which explores contemporary issues in criminology, child development and community safety.

Crime Prevention and Community Safety for Children and Youth in Canada has been produced with sponsorship and support from the University of Victoria’s School of Child and Youth Care (www.cyc.uvic.ca) and the International Journal of Child, Youth and Family Studies (www.uvic.ca/ijcyfs).

The International Journal of Child, Youth, and Family Studies (IJCYFS) is a peer reviewed, open access, interdisciplinary, cross-national journal edited by Sibylle Artz and Jennifer White, faculty members in the School of Child and Youth Care, University of Victoria. This journal is committed to scholarly excellence in the field of research about and services for children, youth, families and their communities and takes an inclusive approach by publishing articles about basic and applied research using quantitative, qualitative and mixed methods; position papers; literature reviews; research reports; briefing papers; book reviews and letters to the editor. IJCYFS seeks to foster and support the dissemination of knowledge about children, youth, families and their communities and the challenges they face. This journal welcomes guest editors and writers who wish to publish special issues and on an annual basis, books that provide in-depth, innovative information about global concerns that impact children and youth, their families and communities.
