Nonfundamental Metaphysics

phil490/500 (ao1)

Metaphysics is often described as "the study of ultimate reality", where "reality" contrasts with "appearance" and "ultimate" suggests a foundation from which all the appearances derive. This explains the prominence in the recent literature of "foundational metaphysics" and its fixation on the fundamental. And yet reality does not at first present itself to us via the fundamental, but rather via nonfundamental appearances of ordinary objects, artifacts, social phenomena, and the like. This seminar focuses on the metaphysics of nonfundamental items like these.
